Name surname, Job title, Company name, County

Update name, job title, company name and county/area.

"Short pull quote in here – can be moved or deleted as necessary."

Keep pull quotes short and snappy. If more room is needed for case study copy, the pull quote can be deleted.

Populating the template

This template layout has been designed to ensure that your case study can be easily inserted into the Guide and that all elements remain consistent throughout. We recommend that you use the template in its original form.

However, if you are working with a design specialist and need to adjust the layout, use the gridlines function to keep elements aligned and orderly. To do this, click the 'View' tab and the check the 'Gridlines' box.

If moving text boxes, keep the case study text and the pull-out quote aligned on the right-hand side. They will not be fully aligned on the left-hand side, so the left quote marks should hang outside the alignment.

Populating the template

Once you've populated the layout that best suits your needs, delete any unused slides from your file.

Supporting students: Careers talk

"I work closely with my local secondary school as a Careers and Enterprise Advisor, attending career days, open evenings and offering short periods of work experience. By working directly with students, the business gets access to new talent as we give young people a better sense of the career options in the electrical industry and how school helps them into work. Some of the students will go on to apply for our short work experience or apprenticeship positions in the future."

"Providing periods of short work experience saves our business time, energy and costs in the long-term. We get first-hand experience of who has the right work ethic and in-work communication skills to fit in with our team, and the young people get a real taste of working in an electrical role."

Scott Monk, Managing Director,
GM Monk and Careers & Enterprise Adviser,
Hailsham Community College, East Sussex
